

1) Star Theatre - A prominent theatre group in the early 1930s, known for its social and political plays. It was founded by Uday Shankar and Usha Khanna. The group was active in the Calcutta region and was known for its experimental and avant-garde style of theatre. It was one of the first theatre groups to use the star system in Indian theatre.

2) Uday Shankar Theatre - A theatre group founded by Uday Shankar in the early 1930s. It was known for its experimental and avant-garde style of theatre. The group was active in the Calcutta region and was known for its social and political plays. It was one of the first theatre groups to use the star system in Indian theatre.

3) Uday Shankar Theatre - A theatre group founded by Uday Shankar in the early 1930s. It was known for its experimental and avant-garde style of theatre. The group was active in the Calcutta region and was known for its social and political plays. It was one of the first theatre groups to use the star system in Indian theatre.

4) National Theatre - A theatre group founded by Uday Shankar in the early 1930s. It was known for its experimental and avant-garde style of theatre. The group was active in the Calcutta region and was known for its social and political plays. It was one of the first theatre groups to use the star system in Indian theatre.

5) Uday Shankar Theatre - A theatre group founded by Uday Shankar in the early 1930s. It was known for its experimental and avant-garde style of theatre. The group was active in the Calcutta region and was known for its social and political plays. It was one of the first theatre groups to use the star system in Indian theatre.

6) Uday Shankar Theatre - A theatre group founded by Uday Shankar in the early 1930s. It was known for its experimental and avant-garde style of theatre. The group was active in the Calcutta region and was known for its social and political plays. It was one of the first theatre groups to use the star system in Indian theatre.

7) Star Theatre - A theatre group founded by Uday Shankar in the early 1930s. It was known for its experimental and avant-garde style of theatre. The group was active in the Calcutta region and was known for its social and political plays. It was one of the first theatre groups to use the star system in Indian theatre.

